

The simplest way to describe The Girls Next Door is to say their voices make undeniable magic together. Yet their sound is anything but simple.

Hailing from Kansas City, The Girls Next Door is the culmination of three solid solo voices that meld together to make the perfect female vocal blend. They bring a style that's a little bit country, a little bit rock n' roll, with a whole lot of blood-rich harmony.

Angie Larson, Barbara Walker and Jamie Malone are the three voices of The Girls Next Door. After sharing the stage at a local venue where they performed together for more than 10 years, their individual solo strengths organically grew to become a powerhouse trio. During those years, they had the pleasure of working with many Nashville greats by being members of the backing band and supporting them with their beautiful harmonies.

In addition to presenting some of the music of their favorite country artists from the 80s and 90s, The Girls Next Door enjoy the opportunity to share some of their most-loved southern gospel songs and hymns they've each been singing since they were young. While they aren't related by blood, Angie, Barbara and Jamie present a family harmony sound that has created a unique bond among the three that is apparent each time their voices come together. The trio hopes that the positive message they bring is an encouragement to all who hear it. The Girls Next Door truly believe that music is a gift from God and hope to be a blessing each time they share that gift with others.